SUBJECT: PAKISTAN MEDIA REACTION: FEBRUARY 19, 2010

Summary: Coverage of U.S. Special Representative Holbrooke's Islamabad visit received extensive coverage both in electronic and print media. Newspapers highlighted his meetings with top Pakistani civilian and military leaders, and his assurance that "Pakistan will get $349 million of Coalition Support Funds (CSF) within a week or so." Media also reported that a Congressional delegation led by Representative Schiff called on President Zardari, and discussed U.S.-Pak bilateral ties. Reports of a bomb blast in Tirah valley of Khyber Agency killing 30 people including a militant commander and a U.S. drone strike that killed four militants in North Waziristan Agency (NWA) received wide coverage. Several major dailies displayed reports prominently that two Taliban "shadow governors" of Afghan provinces, and a key aide of Usama Bin Laden were detained in Pakistan. The U.S. support to build a road in South Waziristan to "provide lifelines for development activities and commerce" for people living in FATA garnered media coverage. Several newspapers and TV networks reported that the U.S. Mission in Pakistan has introduced new online visa forms for non-immigrants from February 22, 2010. Reports and photographs of induction of the first squadron of indigenously manufactured aircraft, JF-17 Thunder, into the Pakistan Air Force received extensive coverage. Nearly all mainstream newspapers ran editorials on recent judicial crisis that was amicably resolved with PM Gilani's declaration to accept Chief Justice Chaudhry's recommendations regarding judges' appointment. EDITORIALS/OPINIONS

Editorial: Stemming The Tide Of Anti-Americanism, an editorial in the country's premier business newspaper, "Business Recorder" (cir. 25,000) (02/19)

"U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman John Kerry has arrived in Pakistan to hold talks with the government and military leaders. While talking to Gilani, Kerry assured him that Washington and Islamabad would jointly identify 'highly visible projects,' which would then be undertaken with U.S. assistance.... In his meeting with Gilani, Kerry welcomed the government's proposal for setting up medical facilities in the militancy-hit areas and strengthening the energy sector for overcoming power shortages. The agreement by Kerry is being interpreted as a major shift in Washington's strategy, which had hitherto felt shy of funding large development projects. The U.S. has understandably agreed to Pakistan's proposal, as it hopes this would help stem the tide of rising anti-Americanism and improve U.S. image. Washington has also tripled its development assistance for Pakistan for the same purpose."

Editorial: A Major Capture, an editorial in the Lahore-based liberal English daily "The Post" (cir. 5,000) (02/19)

"For Pakistan, the arrest of Baradar is another major success in its war on terror. It shows that it is serious in its efforts to arrest the leadership of Taliban. The capture of Baradar highlights the growing coordination and cooperation between Pakistani and the U.S. intelligence agencies. This is a positive development that serves the cause of both countries and the region as a whole. Pakistan has had a uniform policy regarding Afghan Taliban since it started following the U.S. invasion of Afghanistan. It is not the first Taliban leader arrested by Pakistani security forces. Earlier many top Taliban commanders, including Mullah Dadullah, Mullah Akhtar Usmani, former Taliban defense minister Mullah Obaidullah and others have either been killed or arrested because of direct or indirect involvement of Pakistani security agencies."

Editorial: Helplessness Of Coalition Forces in Afghanistan, an editorial in the Karachi-based, pro-Taliban Jihadi Urdu daily "Islam" (cir. 15,000) (02/19)

"Due to stiff resistance from the Taliban, the coalition forces are feeling helpless in their ongoing military offensive in the Helmand province and have failed, at least for the time being, in occupying the town of Marjah, considered the stronghold of the resistance movement. However, the innocent Afghan citizens in the area are being killed in the NATO military operation. Nevertheless, steadfastness of the Taliban against the military might of coalition forces validates all the predictions about the failure of this operation."

Editorial: Composite Dialogue Only, an editorial in the center-right national English daily "The Nation" (cir. 20,000) (02/19)

"Why do the Pakistani policy makers continue to pussyfoot around India. The Indian External Affairs Minister, Krishna, has categorically stated that India will not resume the composite dialogue but will only talk to Pakistan on terrorism.... Pakistan seems to have put itself under pressure and instead of coming out with a clear cut response to Krishna's statement, has asked India to clarify its position. What is there to clarify?... Instead, the Pakistanis are whimpering away and as usual are without any clear cut position on the issue. Of course, the U.S. pressure is also there; but the U.S. has its own interests and it is time Pakistan asserted its vital interests. Fear of a negative Indian reaction should be overcome by the Foreign Office and the political leadership.... If India now is under pressure to resume dialogue with Pakistan, we must ensure that it is a meaningful dialogue premised on the composite talks formula which has already been agreed to by both sides."

Editorial: Talks And The Indian Attitude, an editorial in the second-largest, nationalist Urdu daily "Nawa-i-Waqt" (cir. 150,000) (02/19)

"Indian External Affairs Minister S.M. Krishna has said that there will be informal talks between Pakistan and India on February 25 and not a composite dialogue. He, however, said that we are willing to remove Pakistan's reservations vis-à-vis the talks.... India wants to have dialogue with Pakistan on the topics of its own choosing in order to increase pressure on Pakistan. If India restricts the talks to the issues of its liking then Pakistan should discuss its reservations with India. Unless India changes the talks into a composite dialogue there is no use of restricting ourselves to dialogue on terrorism only."

Editorial: Indian Refusal For Composite Dialogue, an editorial in the center-right Urdu daily "Pakistan" (cir. 10,000) (02/19)

"In fact India does not want to hold composite dialogue with Pakistan. Evading talks on Kashmir is the Indian policy and it does not want to discuss water issue with Pakistan either. India is bent upon violating Indus Basin Treaty and UN resolutions on Kashmir.... Pakistan should send diplomats to America, U.K. and other countries to apprise them about Indian obstinacy."

Editorial: Indian Attempt To Run Away From Talks, an editorial in the liberal Urdu daily "Express" (cir. 25, 000) (02/19)

"Indian Foreign Minister has said that the Indo-Pak Foreign Secretary-level talks would only be on terrorism and that India is not resuming the composite dialogue process.... Pakistan Foreign Minister Shah Mehmud Qureshi has said that talks should not be limited to terrorism, but all issues must be made part of the agenda. The Foreign Office has expressed concern over the Indian Foreign Minister's remarks. The need is for Pakistan to remain firm on its stand of having composite dialogue; it should make the international community realize that India is using excuses to get out of the talks. It is true that a one-point agenda would not help the peace process."
